FOUND DEATH IN POISON

Miss Kraemer's Tragic End Because of a Broken Pledge.

JOURNALIST WOLFF'S LOVE STORY

And Its Termination—Had Lived in Washington as the Husband of a Woman, With the Written Consent of His Legal Wife—The Document's Strange Disappearance Causes Miss Kraemer to Take Her Own Life—A Sad Story.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 24.—Three weeks of separation from the man she loved, and two letters disclosing the sad truth that the valued relations of six years of standing were at an end, sum up the thirty-one years of the life of Marie Kraemer, known as Mrs. Paul Wolff, and tell the preliminary story of her tragic death by her own hand. In the world in which she moved Marie Kraemer was looked upon as the lawful wife of the well-known German correspondent and editor. In the absence of Mr. Wolff, attending to the duties of his new position as managing editor of the Chicago Staats Zeitung, she resided with her widowed mother and young brother at 631 G street southeast, where the entire family, when united, had made their home for the last six years, ever since they came to Washington and Mr. Wolff entered newspaper circles as the correspondent of the New York Staats Zeitung.

At 9 o'clock Tuesday morning Mrs. Kraemer visited her daughter's room and found her in what she thought a natural sleep, and as she had been very restless during the night, she concluded not to disturb her. At 11 o'clock she again visited the apartment, and seeing that her daughter was breathing heavily, attempted to rouse her, but without success. Then she called in several neighbors, and the failure of a second and third attempt to awake the sleeper prompted the summons of medical aid.

When Drs. Roberts and Carraher reached the room at 12 o'clock, the young woman was beyond all help. Restoratives were applied, but failed to revive the patient, and at 2 o'clock she died.

Mrs. Kraemer, who is German by birth and unable to speak English plainly, was completely prostrated by the shock of her daughter's death, but managed to explain to the coroner that she had been suffering from melancholia for a week or ten days past, particularly since Monday, when the second of two letters arrived, and these, with the facts related by a neighbor lady, who knew the family intimately in New York, revealed the whole and story. Slowly the fact was developed that in reality the dead woman was not legally Mrs. Paul Wolff.

Fifteen years ago Paul Wolff, who, it is said, had previously been divorced, came to America and entered the profession of journalism. He found employment on a New York newspaper, and in a short while was married a second time. This union proved a happy one until seven years ago. On a down-town street of New York a thrifty German named Kraemer kept a little hotel and, with him were his family, consisting of wife, a daughter, Marie, and a son about seven years of age. One night the hotel caught fire and the journalist rescued Marie from the burning mass. She was then twenty-four years old and showed her gratitude by falling desperately in love with her rescuer.

Meanwhile the German inn-keeper died, and the young journalist's sympathy was an acceptable solace to the young woman. Their love was mutual, but marriage was impossible. The difficulty was obviated, however, when Mrs. Wolff signed a document, so goes the story, in which she agreed never to molest the couple, provided she were paid a stated sum each month for maintenance. This was promised by Mr. Wolff, and then, in 1885, the Kraemers and Mr. Wolff came to Washington, when the position of correspondent to New York's leading German paper was offered him. For six years the relations were apparently happy. A month ago, when Mr. Wolff decided to accept a flattering offer from Chicago, he informed Marie that she must remain here with her mother and brother. The document which had been signed by Mrs. Wolff seven years ago was until then in Marie's possession, but after Mr. Wolff's departure she missed it, and then for the first time suspected that he wished to terminate their relations. She immediately wrote Mr. Wolff that she intended starting for Chicago at once, but an immediate reply told her not to come just yet.

Still another letter was sent, says Mrs. Kraemer, and then her daughter began to lose heart. She no longer had any doubt of Mr. Wolff's intention to discontinue their previous relations, and Monday's letter from the West destroyed the last vestige of hope to which she clung. The attacks of melancholy became more pronounced, and Marie told several neighbors that she would certainly take her life. But neither mother nor son had any intimation of her proposed suicide until told by the physicians that recovery was impossible.

Mrs. Kraemer can assign no other cause for the deed except the letters, which were furnished for the coroner's inspection. The last letter said in plain terms that their relations were known to others, and any attempt on Marie's part to come to Chicago would only result in one thing—the disclosure of all. The real reason of Mr. Wolff's disclaiming his relations with Marie is said to be that in Chicago he again met the legal Mrs. Wolff, who is living in that city, and their reunion as husband and wife placed the ban of censure on the agreement which for six years protected Marie's honor and broke her life at the end.

Paul Wolff was one of the best known of Washington newspaper men during the six years of his incumbency as an out-of-town correspondent, and few journalists were more popular than he. He was known to have had a brilliant record as an officer of the Prussian army during the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-1871, and for a time served on Von Moltke's staff. Personally he is a man of distinguished appearance, and bears the scar of a French shell as his share of the casualties in the struggle in which he figured. Several weeks ago he received the appointment of editor of the Illinois Staats Zeitung.

Trouble Feared.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Sept. 24.—Outwardly all is quiet in Briceville and Coal Creek to-day, but there is a vague uneasiness discernable all round. A white convict escaped from Briceville stockade last night. The Briceville stockade is heavily guarded and thoroughly equipped for defense. Several guards were sent from here last night. A meeting of the miners has been held. If any determination was reached, it could not be learned. The prevailing opinion about Coal Creek is that no trouble will arise, but a minority hold that convicts will be released and the attempt may be made at any hour.

CORA'S WILD RIDE.

Miles and Miles Like a Mazeppa Fast to a Bronco's Back.

Casper (Wyo.) Special to Denver News.

Miss Cora Arledge, a young girl fourteen years of age, with her father, arrived in town last night from the forests of the West and from the Big Horn basin. Miss Arledge met with a most serious and remarkable accident at her home recently. Her father is a ranchman in the Big Horn basin and one day last week a cowboy rode up to his ranch on a young horse he was breaking. In a spirit of jest he dared Miss Cora to ride the horse, when, without a thought, she vaulted into the saddle, throwing her leg around the horn, and the horse started in to bucking and pitching at a furious rate, but she stuck to him, quieting him every jump. Then the horse began to run and ran for two straight hours over the prairie, with Miss Arledge hanging to the reins and three cowboys in hot pursuit.

One of them at last succeeded in lassoing the frightened animal and gradually brought it to a standstill. Miss Arledge was told to get off, but she answered that she could not, and just then the horse made another plunge, broke the lasso and started again on its wild career. It ran for over twenty miles and then dropped dead, and its daring rider was found unconscious by its side. At first it was thought her leg was broken, as she did not appear to have the use of it, but upon an investigation it was found that no bones were broken, but the muscles of the right leg, from the long and severe strain in holding to the horn of the saddle, had lost their power and her leg hangs limp and useless. She was to-day sent to Omaha for treatment.

A Little Fatherly Advice.

"If ever you marry," said an old gentleman to his son, "let it be a woman who has judgment enough to superintend the getting of a meal, taste enough to dress herself, pride enough to wash her face, and sense enough to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, whenever she needs it." The experience of the aged has shown the "Favorite Prescription" to be the best for the cure of all female weaknesses and derangements. Good sense is shown by getting the remedy from your druggist, and using it whenever you feel weak and debilitated. It will invigorate and cannot possibly do harm.

The people in this world are so much alike that if you aim at one man you hit a hundred.—Acheson Globe.

FINANCE AND TRADE

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

New York, Sept. 24.—Money on call easy; ranging from 6 to 8 per cent, last loan 5 per cent, closed at 6 per cent bid. Prime mercantile paper 5 1/2 to 7 1/2 per cent. Sterling exchange active and weak at $184 1/2 to $185 1/2. Sales $12,000 shares.

The announcement in regard to the Missouri Pacific passing a dividend to-day caused general surprise and for a short time consternation, while the immediate effect upon Missouri Pacific and the rest of the Gould stocks were decidedly demoralizing. The whole market was depressed, and it was surprising how stubborn the resistance was to the bad break and how quickly many stocks recovered when given a chance to show the strength of the present movement in prices. The opening was irregular and excited, and the weakness in Missouri Pacific was most pronounced at the outset, and 4 per cent was knocked out of its price within the first hour. The rest of the market was downward, and while the decline was steady under the pressure to sell, the resistance, in view of the nature of the depressing force, was remarkable. There were some recoveries, although the market remained feverish throughout. In the last hour, however, there was a renewal of the depressing influence, and transactions again assumed a decidedly pessimistic character, while prices melted away rapidly. The market under the continued pressure closed very active and weak at about the bottom figures of the day. The losses were very material and significant, among the leading shares Missouri Pacific showing a decline of 3 1/2 per cent, Union Pacific 3 1/2, Wabash preferred 2 1/2, North American, Reading and Lackawanna 2 1/2, and the rest of the market showing a general decline of 1 to 2 per cent. Government and state bonds dull and steady. Railroad bonds active. Sales $1,772,000.

Breadstuffs and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—The Board of Trade markets were unsettled to-day. Wheat started higher, but New Yorkers and big selling orders here and the local crowd soon got suspicious and the buying became cautious. During the session there was a good deal of talk of dry weather, which was seriously retarding plowing and seeding in the winter wheat district. Corn was weak on account of the continued warm weather. Oats fluctuated within a narrow range. Flour quiet and unchanged.
